

CONGRATULATIONS!

The Chalke Valley Clergy team has some wonderful news to share.....

Five new canons will join the Cathedral's College of Canons this month, by invitation of The Right Reverend Nicholas Holtham, the Bishop of Salisbury.

ChalkeValley
Church

The new canons are....

The Reverend Jenny Taylor, Chalke Valley Benefice

The Reverend Jonathan Still, Rural Dean of Dorchester

Rosemary Stiven, Diocesan President of Mothers' Union

Martyn Underhill, Dorset Police and Crime Commissioner

The Venerable Clinton Langston, Deputy Chaplain General and Archdeacon of the Army, based at Army HQ in Andover

Announcing the new canons, the Very Revd Nicholas Papadopoulos, Dean of Salisbury said:
"As I settle into my new role as Dean, it is reassuring to know that alongside an exceptional Chapter team we have such an active and engaged College of Canons. Their insights and experience at home and abroad are invaluable at a time when the challenges to be met both here in Salisbury and further afield are considerable.

"Our city and Cathedral have been caught up in events which have consequences for the whole world and with the advent of Brexit we can expect unprecedented social and economic change. Going forward I know these newly appointed members of the College will help us to chart our way through potentially turbulent times prayerfully, optimistically and pragmatically."

On admission each canon will be allocated a stall in the Cathedral Quire and, together with other members of the College of Canons, meet twice yearly to advise and provide feedback on Cathedral activities and policy decisions made by Chapter, the Cathedral's governing body.

Revd Jenny Taylor will be admitted to the College of Canons in a special Evensong service at Salisbury Cathedral on Tuesday 9 October at 5.30pm. All are welcome to attend.